Introduction

This 16mm Film Catalogue 1981 presents the Manitoba Department of Education's 16mm film holdings[1] found in its bookable and its self-serve collections. Each of the 3,921 film titles in the Department of Education Library's film collection is indexed by title, series, subject, curriculum heading, author and producer as well as by key word. It is hoped that these indices, coupled with an annotation and other relevant information about each film, will assist you in the selection of films for specific teaching/learning situations.

Listings of new titles added to the collection since the publication of this Catalogue will appear monthly in Education Manitoba under the heading "Focus on Films". Lastly, a Supplement to this 1981 Catalogue will be issued each September, listing and indexing the new additions of the previous year.

This catalogue also provides information on how to order Department of Education bookable films using the Library's automated film booking and confirmation system. In addition, information is provided on how to borrow films housed in the National Film Board Offices in Winnipeg.

The Film Booking and Reference Services section of the Department of Education Library, as is explained in this catalogue, will not only be providing the booking facility by phone or by mail but also will be a location for film information or reference assistance.

Since this is our first effort at producing a computer generated film catalogue, we are interested in your reactions to these changes — positive or otherwise — to assist Library staff in revising the next edition.

Buffalo [motion picture] : an ecological story.
[S.l.] : Encyclopaedia Britannica Films,inc., 1972. 1 reel (14 min.) : sd., col. ; 16 mm. (Environmental studies series [motion picture])
SUMMARY:Documents the buffalo's struggle for survival from the time when vast herds ranged across the American continent, through the mass slaughters of the 1800's, to the successful restoration of these animals in the 20th century. Scenes of buffalo in their natural habitat reveal their physical traits, behaviour and unpredictable temperament. Although attempts to domesticate the buffalo have failed, efforts to save them from extinction have succeeded, and, hopefully, the buffalo lesson will serve as a model in the attempt to save other endangered species.

Endocrine activity [motion picture].
[S.l.] : University of Indiana, Audio-Visual Center, [195-]. 1 reel (20 min.) : sd., col. ; 16 mm.
SUMMARY:Using animation, the location and function of seven important endocrine glands, the pituitary, thyroid, parathyroids, pancreas, andrenals, ovaries and testes are shown for two animals, the frog and the chicken. Location of the same glands are then shown in the human male and female figures. The derivations of three hormones, insulin, thyroxine and testosterone, are given, as well as their effects on the systems of animals. Reviews Berthold's experiments with testosterone on chickens to demonstrate that the testes are endocrine glands producing a hormone. Compares and contrasts the nervous system and the chemical (endocrine) systems.

SUMMARY:A film based on a poem by Earle Birney and a painting by El Greco in Madrid's Prado Museum. The theme concerns the responsibility of the innovator for the thing he makes. In the film a carpenter builds a cross but is reluctant to become involved in the right or wrong of situations that bring men to die on crosses. His interest is in his own craftsmanship. To illustrate this moral the film-maker used light pen drawings giving color and emphasis through optical processes. Based on a poem by Earle Birney.

SUMMARY:Newell C. Kephart discusses the process of generalization in contrast to the development of splinter skills and illustrates how disruptive factors can result in learning disabilities. He explains the disruptive effect of a learning disability which interferes with patterning responses, and the inability to eliminate non-related information. Stresses the need for the teacher to help develop generalization in such children, a process which normal children develop automatically. Illustrates how such generalization proceeds normally and the need to experiment and observe in order to aid children with learning disabilities in achieving this goal.

SUMMARY:Newell C. Kephart discusses the process of generalization in contrast to the development of splinter skills and illustrates how disruptive factors can result in learning disabilities. Distinguishes between behavior indicating rigidity when faced with tasks, and frustration which results in no learning. Discusses teaching methods to overcome disruptive rigidity and examines multi-sensory presentations. Explains how drill and redundancy are entirely different teaching techniques, and that the methods chosen to achieve redundancy must be chosen with the child's particular disability in mind. Emphasizes that the objectives in teaching children with learning disabilities is to determine the level at which the child is experiencing difficulty, and teaching at that level; and that the teacher must teach generalization and avoid isolated skill learning.

SUMMARY:Art critic John Berger feels we misunderstand the real meaning of European oil painting. The thousands of average works were bought and sold and were and still are the most valuable single object one can possess. The invention of oil paint developed the tradition of paintings as a desirable possession. He argues that this aspect continues today in the modern medium of advertising.

The People at Dipper. [motion picture] / National Film Board of Canada. --
[Montreal] : NFB, 1967.- 1 reel (18 min.): sd., col. ; 16 mm.
SUMMARY:A 1966 film showing life among the Chippewayan Indians of a reserve in northern Saskatchewan, where new ways of living were not in conflict with traditional activities. The film pictures the life of Moise MacIntyre who could have left if he wished, but was satisfied with the lake and its fish and the game in the woods around. Far from rich in the monetary sense, there was a feeling of community that made up for what was otherwise lacking.
